Higher MGS yields could signal fresh opportunities but selectivity is key

Higher Malaysian government bond yields may be starting to present fresh opportunities for fixed-income investors, but fund managers are still proceeding cautiously as global rates remain volatile and yields could move higher.

A multinational financial services group fund manager who does not want to be named says she is “taking the opportunity to slowly redeploy cash in this higher yield environment” while still keeping some cash as “dry powder” in case the bond market corrects further.

The caution comes as yields on Malaysian Government Securities (MGS) have climbed over the past year amid higher global interest rates, a bigger bond supply and expectations that stronger domestic growth and higher oil prices could eventually revive the risk of rate hikes.

The benchmark 10-year MGS yield stood at 3.915% on Sept 3, compared with about 3.421% a year earlier, while the indicative 30-year MGS yield was at 4.309%, versus around 3.894% last year. – The Edge Malaysia

SC developing Sukuk Prisma SDG to fund climate adaptation, resilience

The Securities Commission Malaysia (SC) is developing a new shariah-based framework, known as Sukuk Prisma SDG, to facilitate non-ringgit sukuk issuances that support climate adaptation, resilience and other national sustainable development priorities.

SC chairman Datuk Mohammad Faiz Azmi said the proposed framework will be built directly upon the regulator’s existing Sustainable and Responsible Investment (SRI) Sukuk Framework.

“The idea is to focus on non-ringgit sukuk issuances that translate national priorities into clear, credible and globally recognisable purposes under the United Nations Sustainable Development Goals (SDGs),” he said in a statement.

He said Sukuk Prisma SDG will be aligned with the Maqasid al-Shariah Guidance issued by the SC, while adopting the Asean Taxonomy and international green bond principles.

Mohammad Faiz said the proposed framework remained a work in progress, with the SC welcoming feedback on the initiative and other ideas to finance climate adaptation and resilience. – The Edge Malaysia

10-year Treasury yield hits 5% before reversing as traders await Fed meeting

The 10-year U.S. Treasury note yield pared gains after reaching a multiyear high on Monday ahead of this week's Federal Reserve interest rate decision.

The benchmark rate — which influences mortgages, auto loans and credit card debt — was last up more than 1 basis point at 4.987%. It had earlier reached 5.014%, its highest level since October 2023.

The 2-year Treasury note yield, the most sensitive to short-term Federal Reserve interest rate policy, rose more than 1 basis point to 4.658% after it touched the highest since July 2024 last week.

The yield on the longer-dated 30-year Treasury bond, more sensitive to geopolitical risks, was down less than 1 basis point at 5.353%.

The latest moves come after August consumer price index data reported on Friday matched expectations while remaining far above the Fed's goal of 2% inflation, as it has for the past five years. – CNBC
